Wages are paid in exchange for your labour, not your health.

Yet every day 6,000 workers die worldwide as a result of work-related accidents and diseases.

Workers suffer hundreds of millions of accidents and work-related illnesses each year.

Health and safety improvements have come about only because of pressure to improve standards.

Trade Unions and the Safety Reps they elect and train, have played a key part in these changes and continue to campaign to safeguard workers.

ALL workers have the right to be safe and healthy at work.
