WELCOME MESSAGE

Dear Colleagues,

The healthcare industry is currently booming all over the world. Patient Safety is rapidly becoming an indispensable part of a comprehensive approach to quality care development. It gives care providers the competitive edge needed to meet consumers' increasing awareness of quality care delivery.

Therefore, in collaboration with the Society of Healthcare Academicians invites abstract proposals for paper and poster presentations for the 2nd International Conference on Nursing Care and Patient Safety. This is being planned for Barcelona, Spain from 24-25 June 2020.

The medical profession has long been concerned with whether the care given to and perceived as being good for the patient actually achieves its goal, or at least does more good than harm. Within this context patient safety is crucial, since it can potentially influence both patients health status and medical outcome. The current, old processes are not working anymore. The system is unmanageable and unusable, full of mistakes and errors, founded on empiricism rather than evidence of efficacy and is way too expensive. Therefore, promoting patient safety goes hand-in-hand with person-centered care. A whole new science has grown up around patient safety to try to explain the many circumstances, situations and occurrences that can put patients at risk. It may not be a single issue that causes the problem, but a combination of factors. Patient safety is the cornerstone of high-quality health care. Much of the work defining patient safety and practices that prevent harm have focused on negative outcomes of care, such as mortality and morbidity.

Nurses are the largest group of healthcare providers in the world offering direct patient care and critical staff to the surveillance and coordination that reduce such adverse outcomes. In the past, we have often viewed nursing's responsibility in patient safety in narrow aspects of patient care, for example, avoiding medication errors and preventing patient falls. While these dimensions of safety remain important within the nursing purview, the breadth and depth of patient safety and quality improvement are far greater. The most critical contribution of nursing to patient safety, in any setting, is the ability to coordinate and integrate the multiple aspects of quality within the care directly provided by nursing, and across the care delivered by others in the setting.

This congress will provide opportunities to discuss the current challenges in healthcare, provide an insight on latest trends and to explore the future of patient safety and healthcare science. The congress will assist the participants in understanding, developing and implementing an effective patient safety program in their organizations and prepare them for future professional challenges. From invited plenary presentations, selected workshops, oral and poster presentations, participants will have opportunities to explore collaborative approaches to quality improvement among users, providers and donor organizations, and to examine new systems and ideas that reach across traditional boundaries

Special Session on Nurses role in “Tobacco Endgame”

Health promotion and illness prevention are among the fundamental responsibilities of the nurse. As nurses and midwives, we meet patients from the start to the end of life. The nonprofit organization “Swedish Nurses against Tobacco” SNAT established in 1992 and is funded by the Public Health Agency in Sweden. We also co-operate with the Swedish Society of Nursing. The board consists of nurses with long experience in the tobacco field.

According to WHO’s Tobacco convention “Tobacco Endgame” is an international goal.

In Sweden the goal is to reach a smoke-free society (<5% daily smokers) by the year 2025. WHO highlights the nurses’ role globally during 2020.

We will highlight the nurses and midwives role in tobacco prevention and tobacco-cessation and the possibilities we have as midwives and nurses.

Continuing Nursing Education & Professional Development

Continuing Nursing Education & Professional Development is an extremely important for all in the health care field. As a health care professional you should be keeping up with the major changes happening in the health industry every day. The world of health care is growing extremely fast and will continue to grow over time, making it clear why it's so important to continue your nursing education.

With the technology advancing in such little time now, it's essential for everyone in the nursing field to stay on top of the game. Not only is it beneficial to you to continue your nursing education, but to your patients as well. Continuing your nursing education & professional development allows you to provide the best care possible while having access to the last preventative, diagnostic and treatment methods.

Conferences are one of the most effective forms of learning something today that you can immediately implement to improve your practice the first day back to your office. The 2nd International Conference on Nursing Care and Patient Safety provide the chance to listen to leading experts share the latest best practices, participate in hands-on workshop sessions, panel discussions, and view the latest technologies. Staying at your current level without new learning is simply not an option any longer. With advanced technologies in patient safety, improvements in health care technology and its application for every day clinical care, nurses who fail to keep pace may mean you're actually falling behind in the quality of care you provide.

If you're a nurse or interested in improving your practice, there's no better place to get all the support and knowledge you'll need than at 2nd International Conference on Nursing Care and Patient Safety in Barcelona, Spain this June 2020.
