

Tales From the CORONER'S CASEBOOK

Retired History teacher and Secretary of the Black Country Society, Quintin Watt examines the cases of unexplained deaths, presided over by Henry Smith Esq., Coroner of the County of Stafford, between 1801 and 1842. These included accidents, manslaughter, murders, suicides and 'visitations of God'. Join Coroner Smith's Jury and re-consider some of the cases he dealt with during the first part of his career.
